I can't recommend Jonathan enough to people who are looking to score their best on the LSAT and to people who feel stuck on a score. Jonathan was able to quickly pinpoint my problems areas and to assign the right type of practice to target those areas. He also has a great facility for explaining even difficult to grasp concepts in a very clear manner, and that resolved so many of the issues I was having with the test. The best thing about Jonathan as a tutor is that he definitely tailors the sessions to whatever your needs and style are and doesn't view you as a cookie cutter student. I was also very curious about law school itself, and there have been countless times where he stayed past my two hour sessions to answer all my questions about his favorite classes, extracurriculars, etc. For me, being able to view the LSAT in this more holistic, long-term manner helped to keep my motivation and spirits up during my long stretch of LSAT studying time. Finally, I felt really comfortable tutoring with Jonathan as I had seen his instruction style during a free LSAT prep session at my university and as he has a number of free (and very good) web resources. Unlike other tutors I had worked with, he was extremely upfront about everything--his own scores, the success of his students, etc. which made me feel more comfortable from the get go. I only wish I had known about Jonathan earlier on in my LSAT preparation.
