Tutoring via Skype

In February 2014 I was accepted into Drexel University's JD/PhD Clinical Psychology program. Last summer, I crammed the GRE and the LSAT into 4 months in order to complete applications. Although I did well enough to be granted admission into a competitive graduate program, my law school wanted me to improve my LSAT score by 3 points.

I had 3 months to prep myself for the June 2014 LSAT and very little free time on my hands working 60+ hours a week. I knew I did not have time to take a classroom course and also believed that it would not help me achieve the 3 point jump I needed. I decided to use the 7sage Online LSAT course and get some personal assistance with a recommended tutor.

I could not have been any luckier than I was when 7Sage connected me with Jonathan. I was a little skeptical, at first, trying to complete tutoring via Skype and asking myself if his tutoring fee was worth what I would get out of the experience. My money and time was definitely well spent! Jonathan helped me to figure out what I did not know in terms of LSAT material. He is an expert in conditional logic and really helped me to feel that the test is learnable. Jonathan worked with my crazy work schedule but also helped me to push myself and find the motivation to study. Without his help, I would not have been able to understand the topics I was missing and connect the overall concepts.

Jonathan is not only a great tutor, but he also helped to improve my test taking ability and my confidence. Plus, it was always fun to root and cheer for Bay Area sports!
