Took September 2017 LSAT

Score: 173 (99th Percentile)

Jonathan was the best tutor I've ever had—he was patient, flexible, incredibly knowledgeable, and took time to get to know me and tailor his tutoring to my skills and needs. I had been studying on-and-off for the LSAT throughout college and had become discouraged because I couldn't seem to crack the test: logical reasoning proved to be a massive challenge and I could barely get through even the simplest logic games when I came to Jonathan. Jonathan was incredibly patient throughout the entire process, even when I needed to take a nine-month hiatus from studying so I could get through senior year. By the time I resumed after graduation, Jonathan had already thought out a meticulous action plan and walked me through the test week-by-week and month-by-month. Slowly but surely, I built up my skills and confidence level and the results were incredible: logic games, which I was convinced would be my downfall on the test, became my most reliable section score, and my logical reasoning scores shot up in a matter of weeks. I owe my final score to Jonathan's patience and holistic approach to tutoring. Of course, Jonathan walked me through all the content I would need to master for the test, but—just as importantly—he also paid attention to the test-taking experience: my pace, level of fatigue, etc. He helped me to develop an invaluable test-taking toolkit that proved crucial on the day of the test. In short, I would highly recommend Jonathan to anyone studying for the LSAT—tutoring with him was one of the best decisions I made in college.
